A Severe Sickness Leaves The Kidneys Weak

After recovering from a severe spell of sickness some time ago, I was all run down and suffering from poor blood. I would have pains in my back and hips and my kidneys bothered me all the time. I started taking Swamp-Root and on the recommendation of a friend and found it was just what I needed. My blood became all right and after taking a few bottles, I was surprised at the effect it had on my kidneys. They were entirely cured and I have much to be thankful for that your great remedy did for me.

Yours very truly, W. O. BLACKMON, Phoenix City, Ala.

Sworn to and subscribed before me, this 14th day of July, 1900.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by the use of the BAKER'S KIDNEY PILLS. Deafness is caused by an inflammation of the mucous lining of the Eustachian tube. When this tube is inflamed, you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, you are doomed to continue deaf. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by the BAKER'S KIDNEY PILLS. Send to Dr. J. C. BAKER & Co., Toledo, Ohio.

BRYANT POND.

A Change of Name.

Somewhere away back in the early days, a big mistake was made, when our village and business center was given an entirely different name from the real name, and the mistake has been always "mixed" up.

Probably nine tenths of the towns of Maine, their business centers bear the same name as the village, and as it should be, and in almost all the others the name is in part the same; but here we have two entirely different names and sometimes it is hard for the residents to really know just which one to use.

The only way we can remedy this is to have the Legislature change the name of the town from Woodstock to Bryant Pond, or else have the Government change the name of the Postoffice from Bryant Pond to Woodstock. Many of our citizens would like to see one or the other; but whether we continue with our two names, or change our name, the fact of the case is that we are all one town and it is up to us to build it up and improve it all we can.

The New Highway Law.

How Towns May Lose State Aid Through Negligence of their Municipal Officers.

JOHN CLARK SCATES

The public, but more particularly municipal officers should familiarize themselves with the new highway law, for by neglecting to do so they may deprive their towns of money that would otherwise come to them from the state. The new law provides for two classes of roads—state roads and state aid roads. The state roads or through lines are to be built wholly by the state or such portion of them as can be constructed by the two million bond issue; the state aid or local roads are to be improved at the joint expense of the town and state.

One of the first acts of the new highway commission will be to lay out an inventory system of state highways throughout the state. The exact location and mileage of this system will not be known of course until they are selected by the commission. One fact, however, is apparent, that a proper system cannot be constructed by the two million bond issue. The proceeds of the bonds can be used only for state road construction, and when construction is commenced in a county at least seven miles of continuous road must be built. No part of the money received from the sale of the bonds can be expended in the thickly settled part of towns of over twenty-five hundred inhabitants. The state roads through these sections must be built and maintained by the town and if they are not maintained to the satisfaction of the state highway department the commission has the authority to place them in a satisfactory condition and charge the expense to the town.

Money for state aid roads can be expended on state roads if the town so elects and undoubtedly this will be done in many instances as the amount received from the bonds will be insufficient to construct all the state roads that will probably be selected.

Municipal officers with the approval of the state highway commission may designate any or all of the roads within the limits of their towns as state aid roads and by appropriating certain amounts as indicated below the towns of various valuations will receive the following amount from the state:

Towns having a valuation of	Will receive

Towns having a valuation of over four million dollars, by raising one thousand three hundred and thirty-three dollars for the first four million and one hundred and thirty-three for every million in excess will receive from the state seventy-five cents for each dollar appropriated. These are the maximum amounts. Towns may appropriate a less amount and will receive a less proportionate sum from the state. The ratio of the old law has been adopted, the only change being that the amount the towns may raise and the amount the state shall contribute has been increased just and attractive feature of the new law is that each city and town may in any one year and only in one year previous to nineteen hundred and twenty, raise five times its regular amount and receive not only five times its proportionate amount from the state, but a bonus of twenty-five per cent for so doing. For example, a town having a valuation of one million dollars by raising six hundred dollars for state aid roads is entitled to receive six hundred dollars from the state. Under this new provision in any one year previous to nineteen hundred and twenty this town by raising five times its regular amount or three thousand dollars will receive five times the amount the state would regularly pay or three thousand dollars plus twenty-five per cent of the amount (seven hundred and fifty) making a total of three thousand seven hundred and fifty dollars to be received from the state. A town having a valuation of four million dollars by raising six thousand six hundred and sixty-five dollars would receive from the state four thousand six hundred and sixty-five dollars and seventy-five cents (four thousand six hundred and sixty-five dollars and seventy-five cents). Whenever a section of a state road or state aid road has been constructed the state assumes control of the maintenance of the improved part only, the towns contributing a certain amount per mile for the same ($60 a mile for state roads and half the cost of state aid roads not to exceed $30 per mile). Moreover, all designated state and state aid roads are to be maintained and cared for by the towns until such time as they are improved by the state. Towns must not overlook this fact. Such sections, however, of old state roads as have been built in previous years are to be maintained by the state where they are a part of the new state or state aid road.

Towns may lose their state aid through the negligence of their municipal officers. A radical change from the old law has been made in regard to the time municipal officers shall notify the state highway department of the desire of their town for state aid. Under the old law the officers of towns voting money for state roads at their March meeting were not compelled to notify the state highway department of the action until some time in the spring. This has all been changed. The change is so important that I quote the exact language in section 20 of the new law:

"On or before the thirty-first day of December in the year nineteen hundred and thirteen, and thereafter annually between the fifteenth day of July and the fifteenth day of August in each year, municipal officers shall prepare and file with the commission suggestions for the improvement during the next calendar year of state aid highways located in each town accompanied by plans so far as is practicable setting forth the location of the highway and the nature of the improvement desired. The commission shall examine and report thereon with its recommendations to such municipal officers on or before the twentieth day of February following. Such report shall be submitted to the voters of such towns at the next regular meeting of such town. The municipal officers shall insert in the warrant for each annual town meeting an article calling upon the voters to vote 'yes' or 'no' on the question of the appropriation of money necessary to 'entitle the town to state aid for state aid highways for that year. If any such town then appropriates money for work contemplated in such report, and for the purpose of securing state aid as provided in the act, the municipal officers shall forthwith notify the commission of the amount appropriated. Towns failing to comply with the provisions hereof shall not be entitled to state aid for the year when such state aid otherwise would be available under this section."

This is a very wise change as it allows the highway department to make surveys in the fall and work out plans during the winter so that construction may begin in the early spring.

One great drawback heretofore has been that state road construction in many instances did not commence until fall.

Another law enacted last winter provides that towns that allow turf to be left in the road shall lose their state aid. Another law prohibits abutters from cultivating land within the highway limits thereby filling the ditches.

Municipal officers are compelled to bring suit against all parties violating this law.

I have reviewed such sections of the new law as pertain almost exclusively to the rights, duties, and privileges of towns and the municipal officers thereof, as the duties and powers of the state highway commission which will assume office July 8th are not so important at the present time.

ANNOYED THE GUEST.

What Did They Think He Went to the Hotel For, Anyway?

An elderly, undersized, old fashioned man entered a fashionable New York hotel one night late in the rush season and timidly approached the desk.

"Have you got any sort of place you could put me for the night?" he asked in a rich brogue. "It's tired I am all through, and I have tried several other hotels."

"Would you mind much where you slept?" asked the clerk.

"Not at all so long as there is a comfortable bed."

"Well, the only thing I could give you is a room where the bellboys hang their coats. It is small, but it contains a bed, and I guess you could sleep all right."

"I'll take it," said the stranger, and he divided down in his jeans and pulled out a wad. "How much is it?"

"You can let that wait until the morning," protested the clerk, but the other insisted on paying.

"Will you register?" suggested the clerk, turning the book toward him.

"What's that? No; you needn't wake me in the morning," and he turned to go upstairs.

"I asked you to register," repeated the clerk.

"You needn't send me any ice water," said the other.

"But I want you to write your name in the book."

"Oh!" said the stranger. He took the pen, jabbed it into the inkstand, where he jabbed it about as if it were a brush, leaned over the desk and with a big flourish wrote the letter "G."

Then he caught his breath and made a running hieroglyph on the line underneath, which the clerk from long practice was able to decipher as "ohn."

The visitor then shifted his position, took another brace between the floor and the edge of the counter and started in again. There was a short and then a long sweep of the arm, and when the clerk glanced at the result something resembling a "G" had been evolved. The stranger then traced a series of letters up toward the northeast, all looking alike. The clerk after a little study decided they were meant for "annon." Then Mr. Gannon leaned back, straightened up and as he started to put the pen back asked to be shown to his room.

"But you haven't put down your residence," suggested the clerk.

"My what?" demanded Mr. Gannon.

"The place where you live," explained the clerk.

"Look here, young man," said Mr. Gannon, "you've got my money, and you've got my name. D'you think I'm going to write here all night?" and he flung away the pen he was holding and turned away with something that sounded like a strong cuss word—New York Press.

Mistaken Identity.

Sir Thomas Robinson was a tall, uncounted man, and his appearance was rendered still more striking by his hunting dress, which consisted of a tight green jacket, buckskin breeches and a postillion's cap. He once set off in his hunting suit to pay a visit to his sister in Paris. He arrived at the house while there was a large company at dinner. The servant announced Mr.

"ARE YOU THE FAMOUS ROBINSON CRUSOE?" Robinson, and in walked this remarkable figure, to the amazement of the guests. One of them, a titled exquisite, lifted his fork three times to his mouth and each time laid it down without tasting the food. Unable at last to restrain his curiosity longer, he burst out eagerly, "Excuse me, monsieur, are you the famous Robinson Crusoe so remarkable in history?"

A King's Pun.

The late King Edward of England was visiting Rufford abbey, and one morning, in company with his host, Lord Arthur Savile, he took a walk over the preserves. Suddenly Lord Arthur, a big, burly man, rushed forward and seized a shabby fellow, with a dead pheasant protruding from the breast of his coat.

"What's that Lord Arthur to the king," "this fellow is a bad egg. This is the second time I've caught him poaching."

But the king's handsome face beamed, and he laughed his gay and tolerant laugh.

"Oh, let him go," he said. "If he really were a bad egg you know, he wouldn't poach."

Farm and Garden

COVERING ALFALFA HAY.

Practice Found to Yield Good Results in the Ohio Fields.

The Ohio agricultural experiment station in a circular on "Alfalfa in Ohio" says that harvesting methods have not been found to vary in general from those found best in growing red clover for hay. The first crop, coming earlier than red clover, has less favorable weather, and on this account a number of growers have covered with which to protect the cocks of hay from rain while curing in the field. Most farmers look upon bunching the alfalfa in the field for partial curing as requiring extra labor, besides adding to the risk from the weather.

There is one advantage in harvesting alfalfa often that may in part offset the less favorable weather conditions, and that is, owing to its being thin upon the ground, it dries more quickly. The shorter period of growth produces stems that are smaller than those of red clover, which is also an advantage in curing.

The experience of growers is that alfalfa hay will stand more rain than red clover without injury. Hay that has remained on the field during rainy weather and is later removed solely to prevent injury to the following crop has been greedily eaten in so many instances by stock grazing upon good pasture that those who have had such experience no longer throw away weathered alfalfa hay.

One Champaign county grower has concluded that the loss of moisture that takes place in the heavy alfalfa in the forenoon is more rapid in uncultivated hay than in that cut in the early morning, while it is full of the moisture accumulated during the night. For this reason he does not start the mower until about noon. When this plan is followed the rake is often started to advantage the following morning, as soon as the dew is off. Especially is this true in the case of crops harvested late in the season, when the conditions are more favorable for curing.

Handling the Bull.
I have lately learned of a novel plan to care for a bad bull at pasture which is so simple that every farmer should know it, says a correspondent of Horard's Dairyman. Put a strap around the neck of a cow, same on bull, and use an eighteen inch chain with a swivel in center of chain to chain them together and turn them out. They soon become used to this, the same as oxen, and can do no damage to any one. If you wish to use the bull just untie him for the time.

If the farmer would take just one-half day off and help the women folks arrange some flower beds and trim the shrubbery about the yard the home surroundings would be more attractive and inviting to the farm boys and girls.

Although by dint of relentless and tedious cleaning much of the propolis and discoloration can usually be removed from sections, once the wood has lost its soft, virgin whiteness it is impossible even again to produce the same pleasing and inviting effect. The only logical and consistent way of insuring this immaculate appearance is to protect the sections by using a top bar, on holders—Farm Journal.

Queen bees are shipped to any place where they are to be placed. The method employed is to place the queen in a small wooden cage and provide her with candy as food. This cage is simply a small wooden block hollowed out, the open side being covered with fine wire screen. With the queen are placed about a dozen workers taken from her colony. They feed and groom her during the trip. The closed side of the cage bears the address of the consignee and postage stamps—Country Gentleman.

One Champaign county grower has concluded that the loss of moisture that takes place in the heavy alfalfa in the forenoon is more rapid in uncultivated hay than in that cut in the early morning, while it is full of the moisture accumulated during the night. For this reason he does not start the mower until about noon. When this plan is followed the rake is often started to advantage the following morning, as soon as the dew is off. Especially is this true in the case of crops harvested late in the season, when the conditions are more favorable for curing.

Handling the Bull.
I have lately learned of a novel plan to care for a bad bull at pasture which is so simple that every farmer should know it, says a correspondent of Horard's Dairyman. Put a strap around the neck of a cow, same on bull, and use an eighteen inch chain with a swivel in center of chain to chain them together and turn them out. They soon become used to this, the same as oxen, and can do no damage to any one. If you wish to use the bull just untie him for the time.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

No ewe should be bred until she has reached maturity. You cannot begin to feed and train a colt too early.

Many farmers make a practice of turning lambs into the cornfield in the early fall to gather up all the weeds.

Skip your sheep on good pasture and they will skip you on mutton. Works both ways.

It is conducive to health to feed hogs when they can have the range of the pasture field.

In breaking a colt remember that it is an easy matter to overload and ruin him by causing him to balk.

It costs a good deal of money to buy a satisfactory team. In most cases this can be avoided by the farmer raising his own.

PARISIAN SAGE FOR THE HAIR

If your hair is too dry—brittle—colorless—thin—stringy—or falling out—use Parisian Sage—now—on once. It stops itching scalp, cleanses the hair of dust and excessive oils, removes dandruff with one application, and makes the hair doubly beautiful—soft—lustrous—abundant. Try a 50c. bottle to-day. It will not only save your hair and make it grow, but give it the beauty you desire. Noyes Drug Store.

Paint Put-on.
Think of paint put-on and not by the gallon.

A gallon of paint in the can is of no account to anybody. Put it on. Now reckon its cost and value.

The secret is: one paint goes twice as far as another. A good one goes twice as far as a bad one.

You have a job, say an average job. It'll take 10 gallons of Devco and 12 or 15 or 18 or 20 of middling poor very-poor and trash. You know painter's wages in your town. Put the price of a gallon of paint and the painter's day-wage together. You can't.

Devco costs less than any inferior paint; there are hundreds of them. One paint is as good as another, so long as it lasts good; one lasts months and another years; and the one that goes furthest lasts longest.

Worms in Children.

By Dr. True

If mothers only knew the tortures the little ones may suffer from worms! Thousands of children have stomach worms or pin worms and their parents do not know it. They doctor them for other ailments.

Signs of worms are: Indigestion, with a variable appetite; abdominal craving for sweets; nausea and vomiting; swollen upper lip; sour tongue; offensive breath; hard and full belly with occasional gripings and pains about the navel; face at one time flushed, then pale and in a few cases the face takes on a dull leaden hue. Eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids; itching of the nose; itching of the rectum; short, dry cough; grinding of the teeth; little red points sticking out on tongue; starting during sleep; slow fever; pulse quickened and irregular; body maybe hot; and often, in children, convulsions.

Don't delay! Delays are dangerous. Give the children at once some of Dr. True's Elixir. Directions on the bottle. Sold by all dealers at 35c, 50c and $1.00. Thousands of grateful mothers have given my Dr. True's Elixir to sick children and restored them to health.
